Interpreting the Results

The Neethling Brain Preference Profile (NBPP) identifies the thinking preferences of the individual. Gaining insight into the way we prefer to think, makes us more aware of and sensitive to the preferences of others.

Developing better relationships, making more dynamic contributions in the team and making sound and relevant decisions are but a few of the advantages of understanding your own thinking profile. Making more accurate job and career choices or determining the correct subject or study selections, could eventually lead to the individual enjoying a more productive and fulfilled personal and professional life.

Because the focus is on thinking preferences the end result is neither good nor bad or right or wrong. The Neethling Brain Preference Profile is a descriptive, objective analysis of the individual's thinking choices, with no profile being better or worse than another. Instead, the report gives a description of an individual's thought preferences, and makes recommendations based on those.

The Neethling Brain Preference Profile measures thinking preferences, and not the skills or abilities necessary to execute those preferences. It is therefore possible that an individual could have a very strong preference for order, planning and organisation, but has never had the opportunity to develop the skills to plan and organise. The recommendation in this instance would be that since the desire is there, the skills to support that desire should be developed in order to be effective in a given career.

On the other hand, it is possible that a person could have excellent skills to be a banker, but has a very low preference (which could lead to a rejection) of the processes associated with the job. The individual would therefore not be able to sustain the passion and energy to stay happy and productive in the banking environment. Not only does the profile indicate the dominant or high preference areas but the average and low preference quadrants are also indicated and explained.

It is important to note that the total score for every profile is 300. The scores are categorised as follows:

- 95+ Very high preference
- 80-94 High preference
- 65-79 Average preference
- 50-64 Low preference
- 50 Very low preference

Please note that an individual's profile should always be evaluated in categories and not according to exact scores.

Candidate specific information

Quadrant: L1 - 84High Preference

Susan's brain profile shows that she is very comfortable with factual, logical, rational and critical thinking.

Susan prefers an environment governed by clear guidelines and expectations, working with factual, technical or scientific data. She is very likely to be precise and accurate in her approach, strongly focusing on the task at hand. Objective and factual, Susan is highly analytical and allows little scope for feelings or emotions. She has a strong preference for dealing with concrete information such as quantitative measurements and financial data, and could get frustrated if she does not have all the facts. Realism is very important to her, but she is likely to be critical of anything that does not comply with the high standards that she sets. Susan is performance driven and can sometimes be authoritarian, using external discipline to achieve the desired result.

Susan will be comfortable with analytical problem solving, data analysis, statistics, budgets and logical thinking processes.

Quadrant: R1 - 83High Preference

Susan shows a strong preference for conceptual, original, spatial and holistic thinking patterns.

Susan also has a high preference for processes such as the search for alternatives, integration, risk and strategy. She tends to look at the big picture as well as the facts, but will often get bored with repetitive tasks, searching for diversity and new challenges. Susan will take calculated risks and can become restless if she is not given the freedom to experiment and explore new ideas.

Susan is comfortable with change and innovation and may be able to put ideas and information together and come up with something new.

Quadrant: L2 - 73High Average Preference

Susan is comfortable with processes that require attention to detail, organisation and a procedural approach. She can be dedicated and disciplined, valuing tradition and routine.

Susan will be comfortable in a more structured, controlled and organised environment. When necessary she will handle routine matters and follow instructions. She will see to it that decisions are implemented and the necessary administrative tasks are taken care of.

Quadrant: R2 - 60Low Preference

It is unlikely that Susan will enjoy constant interaction with others, as she prefers working on her own, or as part of a small team. She will most probably not be comfortable in an environment that requires her to be emotionally sensitive, and show empathy and support on an ongoing basis.
